

A fire hydrant valve (frequently referred to as a landing valve) is a manual stop valve installed on pressurized water pipelines to control and regulate the flow of water for active firefighting operations. Mounted onto standposts or wet/dry riser networks, it serves as the critical bridge connecting a building's or city's main water infrastructure directly to the fire hose.